Kiwanis chapter seeks members

A recently chartered chapter of an international service organization has started in Sand Springs and is looking to attract new members in the community.

The chapter of Kiwanis International, which meets at noon each Wednesday at Sand Springs' Crescent Café, 3417 S. 113th West Ave., is inviting anyone who is interested to attend a meeting, said Arin Jones, the club's secretary.

"We'd be glad to have them come to a meeting," she said. "We're always looking for new members."

Kiwanis International, which has thousands of clubs in 70 countries, works to promote community leadership with the ultimate goal of working for the welfare of youth, said Amy Wisner, spokeswoman for the organization.

Kiwanis clubs are involved in many events in the communities they represent and offer opportunities for people of all ages to get involved, Wisner said.

"Our motto is 'serving children of the world,'" she said. "We do that by inspiring everyday leaders who are stepping up to the plate in service."

Sand Springs Mayor Bob Walker said the newly chartered club could offer a good opportunity for area residents who never have been involved with Kiwanis before or who have been affiliated with the organization in the past but are looking to remain involved through the chapter in Sand Springs.

"Come find out what Kiwanis is all about," Walker said.
